HUGE OIL TERMINAL

Plans have been completed for a million dollar river transportation program including the erection of a petroleum river terminal on the Monongahela River in Pittsburgh. The exact location is the Eichler property at Hays, title to which has just been transferred to the American Oil Company. The selection of the site was called ideal by engineering experts from the standpoint of river and rail facilities and the erection and operation of the big bulk storage plant that will be required to handle the American Oil Company's extensive business in this area.

American Oil Company will move its products by water up the Mississippi and other rivers to its Pittsburgh terminal from its new refinery at Texas City, Texas—the world's most modern refining unit. Reaching Pittsburgh, these products will be unloaded at the new terminal where storage facilities are to be erected to take care of not only local requirements of Amoco dealer and consumer business, but also to supply American's bulk distribution plants in other towns with their economical shipping distance of Pittsburgh. American's products will be moved to such towns from the Pittsburgh terminal by water, rail and truck transportation. Provisions will be made for the erection of a steel tank car loading rack, capable of handling a train load of forty to fifty completely loaded tank cars of Amoco Gas and Orange American Gas in a single day. Sufficient area has also been provided for large expansion of these facilities.

The contemplated facilities at the new terminal, essential for the stock and distribution of a whole arm of large importations from Texas, include large steel tanks, warehouses, garages, etc. Transportation equipment to be launched in conjunction with the new development includes a sizeable capital expenditure modern barges, constructed to cope with all river conditions are being ordered and will embody the latest principles of barge building, such as steel hulls for durability, and sloping, skeg bows to minimize the river current resistance in upstream movements. The new barges will be towed by a new steamer, able to tow even or eight loaded gasoline barges with a pay-load capacity of over two and one half million gallons of gas oil. Each of these barges trains will carry the largest water-borne cargo imported into this city.

During an interview concerning the new Monongahela project, Wendell A. Stone, Division Manager of the American Oil Company said, "This is part of an extra step program we are pursuing to develop several water terminals at various river points. Of course, the chief need, 'the American Oil Company has many important terminals, but the erection of Pittsburgh (the river terminal) is an important step in its inland transportation development. We feel it is a real tribute to Pittsburgh's facilities. The new terminal and storage plant will mean more to Pittsburgh, too! It will foster employment and enhance the value of Pittsburgh as a river terminal. This project should be a tremendous step forward toward the general development of inland transportation. Naturally," said Mr. Stone, "this new terminal and other river terminals are all pointed to one thing—improving the service to our customers. The Pittsburgh terminal will mean better service to our customers in Western Pennsylvania and adjacent territory. The great demand for American Oil Products reached the point which necessitated the enlargement of our transportation and storage facilities."

The history of the American Oil Company in Pittsburgh is one of continuous growth. About 13 years ago it took over the operations of a local company and through those established outlets commenced the local marketing of American's well known products, among which are Amoco Gas, Orange American Gas, and Amoco Motor Oils. The demand for these products increased so rapidly that the company found it necessary to expand its outlets to the point where a motorist might be served in all parts of the city and adjacent towns. This was achieved in part by the acquisition of the Pittsburgh Divisional operations of the Transcontinental Oil Company some nine years ago. This step immediately gave the American Oil Company a large number of distributing outlets for its products in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The growth of the American Oil Company in the Pittsburgh area has been in line with its expansion in other parts of the country. Early in 1933 its merger with Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company and Mexican Petroleum Corporation resulted in further enlargement of American's marketing territory, which now comprises all states from Maine to Florida and inland. Louis Blaustein, founder of the American Oil Company, is Chairman of the board.

GREENBRIER PRESBYTERY

The Presbytery of Greenbrier met Tuesday and Wednesday last, at the home of Rev. A. B. Shifflet, of Gay Mills, as moderator for the meeting. The annual reports, was addressed by Rev. Henry L. Beaves of China, and transacted routine business.

Rev. Marlin B. Curry of Hillsboro and W. G. Smith of Alderson, were temporary clerks of the meeting. Dr. James E. Allen, president of Davis and Ekins College, addressed the presbytery the second afternoon bringing his annual report. He was followed by R. K. Robinson with his report from the Davis-Stuart School.

Reports from the churches of the presbytery showed appreciable gain for the past year in membership and finances.

The home missions committee, of which Dr. Lloyd Courtney is chairman and L. E. Kramer, for many years the treasurer, announced plans for extension of activities into unchurched fields and intensive emphasis in certain localities during the summer.

At the close of the meeting there was spirited rivalry for the fall meeting of the presbytery with bids from Parsons and from Salem Church, a Organ Cave. Presbytery voted overwhelmingly, however, to convene a Salem in recognition, at that time of the 75th anniversary of the founding of that church.

The presbytery adopted resolutions commending the local church and people for their entertainment and expressing deep gratitude for the courtesies of the community.

THE WILLIAMS

Dear Editor: I have been on Black Mountain fire tower the past week. It has been very dry for a few days. Us tower men are under heavy responsibility to protect our district from fire. I ask every one to be very careful of their clearing and camp fires. Be sure you notify your towerman before you burn your clearing fires.

I am now working under District Ranger G. L. Varney. He is a fine man. My tower is well equipped with a good telephone system, good fire ladder, good maps and a fine set of field glasses. The government is doing everything possible to protect the forest from fire. That will mean much to us all.

I started in this fire protection business in 1914, working for the State and Fire Association. This makes the 44th fire season I have been on the job and I am more interested in fire protection than ever before. I have worked under seven different rangers, and Mr. Varney is equal to the best of them. He is sure one hunter.

Some of my children stay a part of the time with me at the tower. Last Thursday, as they were going home, they met a good sized bear in the path. The little boy said it went bow and ran around the mountain. I went to look at its track; it was a good sized bear.

I guess this bear believes it will eat my little lambs up, but you know I will watch it close, and if it does I may kill it. This may be a good bear, but there are so few good bears when they get close to sheep.

What fishers I have talked to on Williams River say trout are scarce. Several have been caught at the forks of Cranberry.

I have heard no turkeys yet this spring. Bob Williams, on Briery Knob, said he heard one the other morning below his tower. John Eager, at his camp on Bear Run of Cherry, said a big gobbler came into his woodyard Monday morning.

The new classes in show-card writing and poster lettering will be held each evening at 7:30 o'clock at the graded school building for the next six weeks.

These classes in the art of lettering are being conducted by Curtis McCoy under the direction of the Educational Department of the FERA, and are open to the people of Pocahontas county, especially business persons and high school students and all teachers of the county.

These instructions which will cover a period of about eight weeks, are new to everyone, the only requirements being that each person taking the course will furnish his own equipment, which consists of three brushes, a set of lettering pens, jars of show-card color, a jar of lettering ink. This equipment will cost $2.50 and will be obtained for them at cost.

Any one interested in taking this course or would like further information concerning it should get in touch with Curtis McCoy at the office of County Supt. of Schools C. E. Flynn. Visitors are welcome to attend any of the night classes at the Graded School Building.

Duncan Johnston of the Alderson Advertiser has been appointed postmaster of his home town, upon recommendation of Representative John Kee.

Johnston is one of four brothers, all in the newspaper profession in West Virginia. Albert Sidney Jr. and Marshall Johnston are with the Beckley Register, Malcolm Johnston of Union, is publisher and editor of the Monroe Watchman, which has been a family property for 65 years. It was founded by the father of the four Johnstons. He was an editor of such superior ability and high character, his influence extended far beyond local boundaries. His writings were reprinted by other newspapers from one end of the state to the other. The tone and character of his news paper were high, as was its reputation for integrity. Albert Sydney Johnston was scholar and a gentleman.—W. Va. Bulletin.

"Mr. Hoover bid his young heirs to attack the Democratic administration, but he does not say how or where. Are they to denounce one of the most efficient and successful of the New Deal agencies, the RFC?"

It was taken from Mr. Hoover's armory. So were the farm loan banks and other means to recovery. Are the young crusaders to attack deficits? Mr. Hoover had some bluntness of his own. Are they to exclaim at the rise of the public debt? It was Mr. Hoover's misfortune to see several billions added to it while he was President. It is clear that Mr. Hoover is not able to make a clear line for the bait he seeks to have joined. As the facts present themselves to the country, his trumpet gives an uncertain sound, so far as one can see, must do so for a long time to come.—New York Times.

A Future Debutante makes a pointed observation

Parents . . . nowadays . . . are a problem, aren't they? Just take this matter of running the car.

Parents are just at that impressionable age when all these filling stations . . . with their bright pumps and luring claims . . . offer a constant temptation.

So I took my stand early. I insisted that my parents patronize only Esso dealers and stations. For Esso station products . . . backed by the world's leading petroleum organization . . . are the proven best you can buy.

So, believe me, you don't catch my parents driving in anywhere except at a familiar Esso sign!

And that takes a big load off my mind when I'm not along to look after things. For I'm sure that they're in good hands when they stop at an Esso sign and will get all those little courtesies and services that assure "Happy Motoring."
